The Good News – Increased Demand for Higher Education, Growing Enrollment in Size & Diversity

- Between 1996 and 2006, total college enrollment grew 25%; 50% among students of color, with Hispanics fastest-growing at 64%
- With student body becoming more diverse, white share dropped 9 percentage points in just 10 years, currently at 60%
- Student body diversified at all degree levels, most notably at Master’s and Doctoral levels
- Undergraduates are most diverse, followed by professional and graduate degree students

As More Minorities Enrolled, More Degrees were Awarded to Minorities

- Between 1996 and 2006, Minorities surpassed whites in growth rate of earned degrees at all levels:
  - AA degrees - 78% vs. 18% (minority share 29%)
  - BA degrees – 63% vs. 24% (23%)
  - Master’s – 100% vs. 24% (20%)
  - Doctoral – 64% vs. 15% (15%)
  - First-Professional – 34% vs. 2% (24%)
But Racial/Ethnic and Gender Gaps are NOT narrowing

Preparation for College
- No improvement in high school completion rates (82%); Large racial gaps remain

Access to College
- College enrollment gaps deepened due to uneven progress across racial/ethnic lines

Success in College
- College dropout rates up slightly; Racial gaps still substantial
- Whites and minorities dropped in doctoral degrees they received in engineering
Racial/Ethnic and Gender Gaps (continued)

The Stock of Human Capital with College Degrees

- No more generational gains? Young Americans no more likely to earn college degrees than older adults, except for Asians and whites.
- Men consistently lagged behind women in attaining degrees (esp. African Americans and Hispanics)
High School Completion Rates Over the Past 20 Years

High School Completion Rates for Traditional College-Aged Population (Aged 18 to 24), by Race/Ethnicity: 1987 to 2006

  - 2006: 68%

- Asian Americans
  - 2006: 83%

- American Indians
  - 2006: 83%

* Due to data unavailability, high school completion rates for Asian Americans and American Indians are shown for 2006 only.

Note: Data include high school equivalency credentials such as the GED® (General Educational Development) credential. To obtain a large enough sample size to make reliable estimates, three-year averages were used for trend analysis, except for 2006 data, which had a much larger sample and account for the single year.

College Enrollment Gaps Widened Among Young People

The Path to a STEM Degree

• No lack of interest in STEM fields, no difference by race/ethnicity
• The Majority choosing STEM fields remained in that major field
• After 3rd year Blacks and Hispanics no longer making timely progress.
• BA degree completion in 6 years: 95% of Asians, 87% of Whites, 63% of Blacks and Hispanics (majoring in STEM fields at 4-year)

College Faculty Becoming More Diverse...

Percentage Change in Number of Faculty, by Tenure Status: 1995 to 2005

- Tenured Faculty: -6% Whites, 36% Minorities, 78% Foreign Citizens
- Nontenured Faculty on Tenure Track: 7% Whites, 38% Minorities, 170% Foreign Citizens
- Faculty Not on Tenure Track: 42% Whites, 83% Minorities, 87% Foreign Citizens

But the Vast Majority are Still Whites

Racial/Ethnic Distribution of Faculty, by Tenure Status: 2005

Diversity is Work in Progress -

We have made progress over the past decade in expanding the higher education opportunity for all racial/ethnic groups.

But our progress has not kept pace with the demographic realities. We must accelerate our effort to serve the least-educated and fastest-growing segment of our population.
U.S. Population is Growing More Diverse

Distribution of Adult Population, by Race/Ethnicity: 2006

Younger Adults Aged 25 – 29
- Whites: 59%
- Hispanics: 20%
- African Americans: 13%
- Others: 1%

Adults Aged 30 and Older
- Whites: 72%
- Hispanics: 11%
- African Americans: 11%
- Others: 1%
